Brief summary of major changes:

COVID 19 cases continue to rise across Sub-Saharan Africa. Restrictions were extended in Gambia (in effect 8 July, additional seven days), Kenya (in effect 6 July, additional 30 days), Mozambique (in effect 13 July, continued Level-3 State of Emergency until 29 July), Angola (in effect 9 July, "cordon sanitaire" for Luanda and Cazengo municipality until 9 August), and South Africa (in effect from 13 July, with the addition of a nighttime curfew and a renewed ban on alcohol). Angola also announced tighter restrictions on gatherings, including a ban on religious activities and participant caps for funerals of ten attendees (non-COVID 19 deaths) or five attendees (COVID 19-related deaths).

Rwanda has implemented voluntary, free random testing, allowing for more effective containment and contact tracing of COVID 19 cases. In South Sudan, restrictions eased slightly, with businesses and companies in the capital of Khartoum reopening. A three-month lockdown of Kano, Northern Nigeria's most populous state, was lifted 3 July, allowing employees to return to work with the mandatory wearing of face masks.

Borders across Sub-Saharan Africa largely remain closed, although Seychelles announced 8 July that it will allow international commercial flights from low and medium risk countries beginning 1 August. Kenya will also allow international arrivals beginning 1 August, as announced 6 July.

C1: School Closing	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• BFO: Concern emerged as schools remain closed, compounding children's risk of sexual violence, forced labor, or recruitment into jihadist-linked violence, in addition to falling behind in school.• GMB: Despite extending the state of emergency from 8 July – 15 July, schools continued reopening for 9th and 12th grade.• KEN: The Education Ministry has announced plans to begin gradually reopening schools from 1 September, with a new learning calendar prepared by mid-August. Survey data, however, finds that up to 70% of Kenyans oppose the reopening in schools in September out of concern it will cause a spike in COVID 19 infections.• NGA: Nigeria reversed a previous decision (announced 29 June)
